

NANCY WYNNE CHATS GAILY ABOUT THE DANCE TO BE GIVEN TONIGHT

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Custis Harrison, Jr., Will Be Hosts at a Dance Held in the Ritz-Carlton Ballroom This Evening—Dinners to Precede

ONE of the most attractive dances of the season will be that given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harrison in the ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel tonight. There will be quite a number of dinners beforehand. The Gerald Holmans will entertain at their home, 2018 Locust street, and Mrs. Betty Madeira will give a dinner at the Ritz before the dance. Another dinner will be given by the Ned Robinettes at the Ritz. Mrs. Robinette was Meta Biddle Robinson. It will be remembered. Still another dinner will be given by the Isaac H. Clothier, Mrs. J. Harrison is a charming hostess and quite one of our most beautiful matrons, as Marie Lemoine she was considered one of the very prettiest girls here at the time of her debut.

The preparedness luncheon which was held yesterday at the Adelphi was exceptionally well attended, and "Tony" was busy welcoming every one with his usual hospitality. I noted Mrs. Biddle, of course, present. What an splendid helpmate she is to her husband! There is not a thing in which he is interested that she is not interested, too; and she was so fond of society when she first came here as a young bride. She is quite a striking example of what a wife should be. Other women who were present and who gave their attention to the really fine speeches were Mrs. George W. Childs Drexel, Mrs. Hollister Sturges, Mrs. Allan H. Harris, Mrs. Henry B. Patton, Mrs. Harold Yarnall, Mrs. E. C. S. Lewis, Mrs. Joseph M. Gazzam, Mrs. O. J. de Roussee, Mrs. Herbert Taylor and many others. Tonight the campaign for preparedness will be initiated at a dinner given by a representative committee of men and women at the same hotel. It will be exceedingly interesting, as Major General Wood, U. S. A., and Major General Barnett, U. S. M. C., will address the guests.

It was frightfully exciting at the Mask and Wig, you know, because I simply had to find out who the man was I saw being fitted in a Chestnut street store last week. It was a scream, my dears, as I went into one fitting room, the door of the next was ajar, and there stood a creature with short hair, neatly parted, and pedal extremities not of the smallest, being fitted into a frock of white crepe de chine made with an accordion-pleated skirt and Russian blouse, the peplum of the blouse being edged with strips of rainbow silk. Well, when "Ann Balaam's" friends began to arrive in the flat at suddenly I saw the frock and said, "There he is!" but alas! how could one be sure? For he kept coming in until there were six of him, and all with white shoes and high heels and such splendid wigs topped with green straw hats and wide-spread wings of green. The shoes looked small, and as for the ankles, they were slimmer than many a real girl's, and then with yellow, brown and even red wigs it was impossible to tell if it had been Jack Carpenter, Charlie Service, A. H. Welsbach, C. M. Kiser, M. N. New, or H. J. Hayden. Most of all I liked the donkey, though, for Phoebes proved to be neither man nor horse, "just a plain, pesky, one-eyed mule," but such a beautiful one and with so charming a voice. I thought dreamily of the verse:

"Sweetly sings the donkey as he goes to grass, He can sing no better, because he's such an ass. He haw, he haw, he haw, haw, haw, haw, haw!" NANCY WYNNE.
